The ground floor is concrete, and includes a 32-space parking garage, a community space and 2,500 square feet dedicated to three retail/commercial spaces. AHA sold part of the Ashby Lofts parcel to a popular local grocer that will open its doors in 2009.

Amenities  Community space includes an outdoor terrace with a fenced-in play area, a community room, computer room, a social services office, two elevators, two lobbies and secure parking for 32 cars and six bicycles. Buses run along Ashby Avenue, and BART, the regional rapid transit system, has an Ashby Avenue station located one block from the development. San Pablo Avenue, one block east of the site, is a major commercial corridor. Berkeley is a fairly compact city, with goods, services, medical clinics and hospitals, and schools easily accessible.

A new bike path adjacent to Ashby Lofts is on its way. AHA supported the city of Berkeley in its efforts to acquire a railroad right of way that hadn’t been used for about 40 years. The city was able to acquire it while Ashby Lofts was under construction. When complete, the bikeway will connect residents and the community to Berkeley, Oakland, Northville and surrounding destinations.

Social Services  AHA contracts with Tool Works to provide on-site services to residents. A service coordinator arranges various social activities like coffee hours and movie nights, provides referrals to other agencies, assists residents with enrollment in state and county programs, assists with finding home health aides, and provides limited case management. A job developer is at Ashby Lofts twice per week to help residents with resume writing, employment skills and finding matching employment. AHA also works with the county food bank, and some other AHA properties have food pantries. At Ashby Lofts, qualifying residents can request a food bag every week.

Developer  Affordable Housing Associates was founded in 1993 with a clear directive: Rewrite the rules of affordable housing. The organization is determined to increase the supply of low-income housing in Berkeley by upgrading existing homes and building new ones. All AHA developments use high-quality materials and, wherever possible, rely on local workers and businesses.
