Description

In New Orleans' Lower Garden District, a new redevelopment project is underway that resulted in 52 apartments, a commercial kitchen that prepares fresh and healthy meals for schools and social service clients and offer job training, and retail and warehouse space in a rapidly transforming neighborhood.

1770 Tchoupitoulas is the adaptive reuse of three industrial buildings along the Mississippi River waterfront that have been vacant for 20 years. A main feature of the project is a food production facility operated by Volunteers of America of Greater New Orleans, modeled after the successful "Catering for a Cause" program in Oregon. The organization anticipates serving 110 low-income clients and 2,110 students at eight area schools by its fifth year of operations. The food production facility will also provide culinary arts training to low-income individuals preparing for careers in the food industry.

The residences were built to U.S. Green Building Council LEED Homes for Silver standards as well as the Enterprise Green Communities Criteria. Of the 52 apartments, 27 will be affordable to families earning up to 80 percent of area median income. The main commercial building will be built to LEED standard.

Financing

Enterprise provided $10 million in New Markets Tax Credits (NMTC) allocation to the project. Volunteers of America National Service provided $8.5 million in NMTC allocation. U.S. Bancorp Community Development Corporation was the equity investor for the full allocation and provided an additional $2.6 million in historic tax credit equity. Iberia Bank provided a $3.2 million term loan and $7.7 million in bridge financing. The balance of project costs was funded by $2.6 million in state historic tax credit proceeds, a $2.5 million loan and $1 million grant from the State of Louisiana Office of Community Development, and other grants and fundraising.

Market

1770 Tchoupitoulas is located two miles south of New Orleans' central business district along the Mississippi River. The immediate area has been undergoing a transformation from primarily industrial uses to a mix of residential, retail and park space. The site is conveniently located with easy access to the highway and bus routes into the central business district.

Community Impact

The city of New Orleans suffers from an extremely tight housing supply and limited access to fresh foods, with over 40 percent of the population living in a "food desert." 1770 Tchoupitoulas addresses these needs by redeveloping long vacant historic buildings to provide workforce housing, healthy meals, and job training. The project created approximately 130 construction jobs and 10 permanent jobs at the food production facility.
