

Sharon L. Heck

Vice President, Finance and Global Tax

Intel Corporation

Sharon L. Heck is vice president of Finance and the director of Global Tax at Intel Corporation. She leads the global tax team responsible for Intel's U.S. federal, foreign, state and local taxes. She is responsible for all aspects of the global tax function including audits, policy, compliance, planning, transfer pricing, due diligence and risk management. In 2018, she joined Intel with a history of finance and tax leadership experience as a partner with two major public accounting firms. Recently, she served as vice president of tax, and corporate secretary for Berkshire Hathaway Inc. in their Omaha, Nebraska world headquarters. During her three decades of experience, Heck pursued a passion for working with large organizations on matters related to tax function effectiveness and operational excellence.

Heck chairs the R&D Credit Coalition and serves as a member of the board of directors for Enterprise Community Partners. Furthermore, she is a member of several business organizations including the Silicon Valley Tax Directors Group, Financial Executive International and Women in Technology International. She also acts as a regular instructor and guest lecturer on both tax technical and general leadership matters.

Heck holds a doctorate degree from Creighton University, a master's degree in Taxation from Georgia State University and a bachelor's degree in Accounting from Troy University, where she was inducted into the Troy University Accounting Hall of Fame.