PRESENTATION OVERVIEW
UNDERSTANDING THE BASICS OF JOINT VENTURE EQUITY

Presentation Overview

1. Financing real estate using a joint venture structure can be complex, with many developers and investors lacking a basic understanding of some of the considerations that go into such a partnership.

2. In real estate, an equity joint venture is a legal partnership between two or more individuals or entities (each a “partner”) to jointly acquire and/or develop a property.

3. Each partner typically brings a unique skill set or ability to the partnership. Often one partner brings access to the investment and day-to-day oversight responsibility, while the other might bring the majority of the capital and be more passively involved in the investment.

4. As most large real estate projects require financing that involves real estate operators working with real estate capital providers, understanding the mechanics behind a JV arrangement is important for all involved.

5. These joint ventures are a critical part of the process, as they can allow commercial real estate projects to be feasible and get off the ground. This webcast will discuss JV practices for successful transactions including role of capital and operating partner, equity positions, limited partner and sponsor roles, cash flow priorities, and internal rate of return requirements.

SPONSOR
- Creates and implements business plan for the asset

INVESTOR MEMBER
- Provides majority of investment capital
- Has limited day-to-day involvement
- Retains certain decision-making rights

REAL ESTATE ASSET
Sponsors of real estate joint ventures typically invest a small percentage of the capital (i.e. 5 - 20%) but receive a higher percentage of the overall economics of the transaction given their critical role in the transaction.

1. Acquisition or Development Fee: Sponsors typically receive a 1% acquisition fee or a 3 – 5% development fee depending on the type of transaction (i.e. acquisition or new construction).

2. Construction Management Fee: Sponsors typically receive a 5% construction management fee to supervise any rehabilitation. In new construction deals, this fee is typically included in the development fee.

3. Asset Management Fee: Sponsors typically receive a 1% fee on annual revenue to be the general partner and asset manager of the transaction, which includes reporting to the investor member.

4. Cash Flow Split / Carried Interest: There is significant variety in how cash waterfalls can be structured, but generally there is pro-rata sharing of cash flow until a minimum return is earned (i.e. 8 – 10%). Thereafter, the Sponsor typically receives a larger share of the cash flow via carried interest (aka “promote”), which can range from 20 – 50% after the minimum return is earned.
Typical Joint Venture Structure – Investor Economics

Investors in real estate joint ventures typically invest a large percentage of the capital (i.e. 80-95%) but receive a smaller percentage of the overall economics of the transaction given their more passive role in the transaction.

1. Investors will expect the joint venture to reimburse it for transactions costs of making the investment, such as third-party reports and legal fees.

2. Investors will have varying return expectations, ranging from 5% for highly impact oriented investors (which can be hard to find) to 15%+ for traditional capital providers.

3. Investors receive the balance of cash flow that Sponsors do not, which typically includes their pro-rata share of cash flow (including disposition) until a minimum return is earned (i.e. 8 – 10%). Thereafter, the Investor typically receives a smaller share of the cash flow, which can range from 50 – 75% after the minimum return is earned.
Typical Joint Venture Structure

CASH FLOW
10% sponsor distribution
90% investor member distribution

CARRIED INTEREST
30% sponsor residual cash flow distribution
70% investor member residual cash flow distribution

JV AGREEMENT
10% sponsor contribution
90% investor member contribution

PREFERRED RETURN
8% preferred return is paid to both members
Contributed capital is returned to both members
Joint Ventures Within the Sponsor

Beyond a real estate joint venture between a Sponsor and an Investor, it is also common for two Sponsors to joint venture together on a single transaction, and in some cases bring in an Investor as well.

1. In sponsor joint ventures, one partner may be the “finder” of the transaction and the other may have more experience or financial wherewithal to offer.
2. One partner may invest more of the capital than the other.
3. The two partners divide the economics of the sponsor, and the terms can vary widely.
4. Compatibility between partners is critical. Some relationships end poorly while others are wildly successful.
5. Enterprise’s Joint Venture Guidebook is a helpful resource.
